A new year! What is the path ahead? Is it “down to Gehenna or up to the throne,” or as Mithras said,

“Many roads hast thou fashioned,
all of them lead to the light”?

Miguel de Cervantes of Don Quixote wrote in 1610, “There are two families in this world; the Haves and the Have-nots.” The response to this pseudo plague has made that clear, the Zoom class and the rest. Government schools in Ontario are again closed. Private schools are mostly open. Tough on the poor kids. Good for me as the roads are empty when I drive to the clinics.

The pampered Zoom class do not know history. During a civilization collapse, as that seems to be what is happening, they never survive.

Welcome to the world of George Orwell. From Animal Farm: “Four legs good, two legs bad” translates to “needled good, un-needed bad.” But you gotta run to keep up with them needles. In Israel, it is four needles good, two needles bad. Also, “all animals are equal, but some are more equal than others.” In Europe, no needle passport, no work, or shopping for you. The fact that the needle seems to reduce resistance to Omicron (i.e., make infection more likely) is ignored.

In 1984, Orwell described “Big Brother is watching you.” He certainly is via your needle passport. And doublethink; the failed policies of masking and lockdown will be reintroduced, and this time, they will do something.

And think of Oppenheimer, looking at the atomic bomb blast: “[Scientists] have known sin; and this is knowledge which they cannot lose.” Despite the number of crazy fingers on the trigger, only two bombs have been dropped in anger on Hiroshima and Nagasaki. The scientific sin was not the bomb, it was Climategate, which revealed to the world that science was being perverted. That was an inflection point as the perversion was ignored, and leaders carried on with the destruction of Western civilization.

This made it fairly easy to use a tightly targeted virus to close down the world. Most people now know that in most countries, year on year, there have been no excess deaths. And yet the charade continues.

There are a few bright lights like Scandinavia and Florida. Will they be enough to withstand the onrushing tide of collectivism? What do you think?

Comments

1. My thoughts you ask. The stupid gets stupider! The gullible get more gullible! The children are punished further; and the elderly, whose time on earth is short, get no visitors, no love, and no last chance to impart wisdom. I cannot thank you enough for being the voice of reason for the last two years. Without it, I thought I was going insane. But how on earth are we supposed to fix this mess?
  2. When you have a segment of society who are actually calling for more restrictions, enforced mask-wearing, etc., it is only a matter of time before we get civilization to collapse.
- A. What other conclusions can you draw? It looks like a civilization searching for its own destruction.

So is this the end? The ineffable sadness of watching Western civilization walk over the edge of the abyss into nothingness. I guess we had a good three hundred years. As Dowson wrote,

They are not long, the days of wine and roses:
Out of a misty dream
Our path emerges for a while, then closes
Within a dream.

We keep dreaming this nightmare will end. Omicron seemed to be a gift from God. It is humanized, as Geert and Knut feared, as it can attack those with multiple needles, so no immunity. But amazingly, it is an upper respiratory infection like the common cold, so it is relatively benign and yet confers immunity to the Wuhan virus and its variants. Omicron is, in fact, the ideal vaccine.

So we thought to rejoice. But then, you hear the voices of tyranny. The dear leader of Canada has called those with no, or only a couple of needles, misogynists, and racists. In France, if you don't have boosters, you are a noncitizen, unfit to walk the streets. In Austria, no needles, no shopping for you, and soon, no leaving your home.

So all over the West, the un-needled and un-boosted are unclean, not fit for society. We have heard this before. Soon the jackboots will be heard on the streets and the thunderous knock on the door at night before it is kicked in. Then the transport to the concentration—sorry, quarantine—camps. These have already been built in Australia, and I hear of other places. History does repeat.

With any luck, everyone will get Omicron and then how can the authorities possibly force the needle on everyone? If repeated needling continues, the fear is the immune exhaustion of humans and the immune escape of all viruses. We will know in five to ten years. Maybe the risk is small for us elderly with the weak immune system, but the risk for our children is surely serious.

I never liked Goethe and always thought Young Werther (1774) was an idiot. But I did see one line: “Who rides so late through the night and the storm? It is the father with his child.” We hope, we fervently hope, that parents can protect their children from the menace of the needle.

1. Hopefully, the Supreme Court in the US will rule that mandatory vaccination is unconstitutional.

- A. There is hope for the US, but little chance of any such ruling in the rest of the Anglosphere. The courts seem dumb on this issue.
